connect the British Isles with the Continent is being given by the War Committee on Imperial Defence.
The Premier admitted that before the war the balance of opinion had been against the project, but said that the experience of the war undoubtedly was a new factor of immeasurable importance in enabling statesmen and naval and military experts to judge of the value of the project. He added that such a tunnel as the deputation proposed would have been of great value to the British Empire for general war purposes.
"I will see," added the Premier, "that time will be found for a full review of the question in the light of that experience."
